WELCOME THE STRANGER

In Charlottesville, Virginia, is an old building where, in the 18th century, visitors could eat, drink, spend the night and share their lives and thoughts with one another. In 1784 the building's owner, William Michie, wrote these words of welcome:

“Let the guest sojourning here know that in this home our life is simple. What we cannot afford we do not offer, but what good cheer we can give, we give gladly.

“What thou thinketh ye shall say, if ye wish, without giving offense. What we think, we also say, believing that truth hath many aspects, and that love is large enough to encompass them all.

“So, while ye tarry here with us, we would have thee enjoy the blessings of a home: health, love and freedom, and we pray that thou mayst find the final blessing of life. Peace.”
